of the guests are concerned, was no ex-

high-rolling strangers from San Francisco, a steamship captain, a British naval officer, and two or three young women who hang on the fringe of Honolulu society, gave the little hop peculiar embellishments of their own. Among these extra frills, as they might be called, were a score or more of insiduous cocktails and a few bottles of GEO. E. PRICE&GEO. H. RICHARDS obtained and absorbed the ingradients of a fiery jag.

Then the fun began. Most of the superfluous drinking had been done out in the lanai, or great sheltered piazza of the hotel, where the tipplers would pass their time behind potted plants and screens, unobserved by the dancers. N. W. cor. Prince and Royal sts., Alexandria.

Country and city orders solicited and percentily filled sep24 tjan1 the lengthy corridor that traverses the main part of the hotel from the lanai to the dining room, and hanging to his cans of the female sex. Every now and then the latter stopped to kick at the chandelier or at the hat of some bystander, and in this fashion the dining room was finally reached.

There the revelry was something so scandalous that it has been barely hinted at in the cautious Honolulu press, though the town gossips have canvassed all its details. A little was eaten, a great deal more was imbibed, and then the ladies vied with each other in high kicking, while the male er in high kicking, while the male members of the party held their hats up on walking sticks to tempt ambitions feet to loftier efforts. Tiring finally of their sport the party divided China, Glass, Crockery Ware, Fancy Goods

A little later a San Francisco gentleman left the lady in his charge asleep on a bench and went to look for his wife. He searched the hotel as closely as his condition would permit, and finally saw the missing helpmeet in company of a British naval officer. row occurred, however, the husband preferring to see the lady alone. He went to his room and waited. When she finally made her appearance the row that took place awoke every sleeper on the floor. A truce seems to have been patched up since, as the couple are seen daily in each other's company, looking amiable.

tempted to do through the columns of the morning Honolulu paper. It happened, however, that Friemann was asleep at the time of the trouble. It is alleged that a boy of twelve years had been put on the night shift by appointment of the Macfarlanes themselves. As soon as Friemann found that he was being made a scapegoat he resigned, and threatens, unless ample retraction is made, to sue his traducers for heavy damages Thus the affair may get an airing in court.—San Francisco Chronicle.

It speaks volumes for the conservatism of the Honolulu press that two days were allowed to go by before anything was said. Then the Star printed this mild paragraph:

The series of scandals resulting from the late dance at the Hawaiian Hotel are without a parallel in the recent social history of Honolulu. It reminds one very strongly that the social influences and practices of the monarchy still prevail in certain circles

This stirred up the Macfarlanes, who lease the hotel and manage it. They were fearful that the reputation given the house by the inght's proceedings would lead the government, which owns the premises, to cancel the lease. Their first move was to shift the blame upon Steward Friemann, and this they attempted to do through the columns of the morning Honolulu paper. It happened, how-

Honolulu rarely lacks a social sen-sation of some kind, but it has one now that puts all previous affairs of the sort on the list of the commonplace. What led up to the lively episode which is town talk in the Kanaka capital was an innocent sub-cription dance at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel. Such dances are often held there, and as a rule they are decorous functions and break up early. This one, so far as the majority ception to the rule.

The trouble came about because some

None of the champagne drinkers moved about much until they had quaffed deep and long and had grown uncertain about the points of the compass. Then they all started at once for the dining room to get a tagto of rollids. The average of the compass room to get a taste of solids. The average looker-on in Honolulu will never, while memory holds a seat in his distracted globe, forget the spectacle those strangers made.
